

Dr. Li is a research staff member with the group of Vehicle Systems Research at Center for Transportation Analysis in the Oak Ridge National Laboratory. He holds a PhD in Civil Engineering with a concentration in transportation and has been working on variety projects related to mobility analysis. The focus of his recent research work includes connected vehicle technology, transportation electrification, and vehicle as well as traffic modelling. Dr. Li is a member of SAE International as well as a member of Institute of Transportation Engineers. He also serves as a committee research coordinator in Transportation Research Board of the National Academies.